Chicago, IL -- As a result of the current sluggish housing market and an influx of foreclosed properties, many home sellers are having difficulties moving their homes quickly. Furthermore, they are having trouble finding buyers who are willing to pay the fair market value for their homes.

Fortunately, there are a few positive signs for home sellers. According to a recent report from the National Association of Realtors, over the past few months, national home sales have risen as compared to sales from last year.

And for people looking to sell their home in the Chicago Gold Coast area, there is even more reason to have peace of mind.
